Libertas

The Libertas is a rare 1926 coaster barge which was used for cement transport up till 1998. In 1999 she was converted into a luxury houseboat for the Borneokade in Amsterdam. The classic hull and the aft were kept intact whilst the rest of the exterior was refurbished and added to in the traditional manner. The interior, on the other hand, makes use of the ship's beautiful lines and forms to create spectacular spaces with all the mod-cons one would expect in a floating villa such as domotica. The living area in the hull, the kitchen in the tea hut and the lounge in the steering hut are connected by stairs and voids as one continuous space spread over three levels. Keeping the most characteristic original details intact creates an exciting contrast with the modern lines of the new interior.
